SURPRISED THE BOERS

British Troops Cross the Tugela, Meeting Little Resistance.

The Enemy Is, However, Holding a Fortified Position Five Miles Back From the River, Where a Fierce Battle Is Expected.

London, Jan. 18 .- The Times publishes the following dispatch from Spearman's farm, dated January 17, 9:20 p. m.:

"The force marched westward on January 10. Lord Dundonald by a dashing movement occupied the hills above Potgieters drift, 15 miles west of Colenso, taking the Boers completely by surprise.

"The same evening the infantry followed. Gen. Lytleton's brigade crossed the river yesterday, and to-day shelled the Boer trenches beyond with howitzers.

"Gen. Warren's force is now crossing Trichardte drift five miles above. He is not opposed, although the Boers are holding a position five miles from the river.

This news completely disposes of the statement that Sir Charles Warren's force went in the direction of Weenen, and it tends greatly to restore confidence to Gen. Buller's tactics. The supposition that he had divided his forces into three columns had given cause for anxiety. It is now seen that such a view was erroneous, as Gen. Buller's forces are con-

In Cape Colony Gen. Methuen has made a demonstration in force, shelling the Boer works. Gen. Gatacre is skirmishing around Molteno, and Gen. French has been throwing a few shells at the Boers at Rensberg. Col. Plumer is moving to the relief of Mafeking and Bechuanaland. He is now in command of less than 2,000 men. Mafeking is in a bad way; the seige is being pressed with determination, and the Kaffirs are deserting because of pinched rations and the necessity of eating horse meat.

The Standard publishes an account of the assault upon Ladysmith on June 6 which shows that the garrison was surprised and that several times the situation was critical. Out of a de-tachment of 30 Gordon Highlanders who surrendered every man was wounded, says the correspondent. Curiously enough, this is the first mention of the capture of Highlanders. The Boer repulse at Ladysmith was the heaviest counter stroke of the war.

London, Jan. 18 .- A special to the Times from Spearman's farm, dated January 17, says: "The British column moved to Spearman's farm, beyond Springfield, on January 11. The difficulties in crossing the swollen river were great, the wagons being quite covered."

London, Jan. 18.—The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing late Wednesday evening, January 17, says: "Arrivals from Estport that there was fighting on the Tugela to-day. The result is

London, Jan. 18 .- The Daily Mail has the following, dated January 17, from Pietermaritzburg: "News has been received that Buller is making satisfactory progress."

Modder River, Cape Colony, Jan. 18. -There was a demonstration in force under Gen. Methuen Tuesday, a division being engaged, with the object of ascertaining the strength and disposition of the Boer force, and also in order to try to draw the Boers from Kimberley, where lately they have been active. The British discovered the Boers in great force, and being reinforced from the direction of Jacobs-

At 4:30 the artillery opened fire, the shells dropping in the Boer entrenchments with great precision. The attack was directed against the Boer left. The firing continued until sunset, mostly with artillery, although the guards, on the right, fired some long range volleys. The Boers reserved their fire until the British were returning to camp in the darkness, when six shells followed them. There were no casualties among the British troops.

THE FINANCIAL BILL.

Senate Will Vote on the Measure Thursday, February 15-No Hour Is Set.

Washington, Jan. 18 .- The senate has agreed to vote on the financial bill on Thursday, February 15. No hour was set, however. The senate committee on foreign relations Wednesday agreed to report favorably the convention known as The Hague treaty, negotiated last year. The treaty was not amended.

The committee also acted favorably upon the extradition treaties with Peru and Argentine, also the treaty to continue the Mexican boundary commission. The reciprocity treaties were not considered.

When the house met Wednesday it decided by a vote of 174 to 138 that the census bill reported by Mr. Hopkins (Ill.) Tuesday was privileged.

Mr. Barney (Wis.), from the committee on appropriations, reported the pension appropriation bill.

The house then went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill under the five-minute rule. The senate adopted the modified

Hale resolution relating to the seizure of flour in Delagoa bay. The resolution, as it passed the senate, reads: "Whereas, It is alleged that property of citizens of the United States, not contraband of war, has been lately seized by the military authorities of Great Britain in and near Delagoa bay, South Africa, without good reason for same, and contrary to the accepted principles of international law; and

"Whereas, It is alleged said property is now unjustly detained by the military authorities of Great Britain, in disregard of the rights of the owners of the same; therefore be it

"Resolved by the senate of the United States, That the president is hereby requested to send to the senate, if the public interest, all information in the possession of the state department relating to said alleged seizure and detention, and also to inform the senate what steps have been taken in requesting the restoration of property taken and detained as aforesaid.

INTERNAL REVENUE TAX.

An Excess of Receipts Over Expenditures Will Cause a Reduction on Several Articles.

Washington, Jan. 18 .- In view of the excess of revenue over expenditures and the probability that receipts will be larger next year than now, and that the treasury will not need the money for current expenses, the attention of the ways and means committee has been directed to the subject of the internal revenue, with the idea of amending the law if reduction of taxes is favored.

Several propositions have been mooted, among them being the demand of the brewers to have the beer tax cut in half. This suggestion has been taken under consideration by a subcommittee, and it is understood to be their opinion that if any of the taxes are soon dispensed with the first to be taken off will be those on express receipts and telegraph messages, both of which are added to the cost of carrying.

The committee is not ready to cut the $2 beer tax, but it may try to repeal the stamp taxes on receipts and messages, which do not amount to much in the aggregate, but are irritating to the public. To cut the beer tax would be to drop half of $68,000,000 which amount was about the revenue from fermented liquors during the last year.

MAKING HIMSELF SOLID.

Gen. Wood Getting on the Right Side of the Havana Newspapers by Paying His Subscription.

Havana, Jan. 18.—The newspapers comment favorably upon the fact that Gen. Wood has subscribed for each daily newspaper and given instructions that the bills for the same shall be presented to him each month personally. The Diario de la Marina says: "It is the first time in the history of the island when a governor general has either paid or offered to pay a newspaper subscription." Gen. Wood left for the province of Pinar del Rio, accompanied by Gens. Lee and Chaffee with their aides. His object is to inspect conditions in that part of the island and he will visit a number of the smaller towns and make a close personal examination, so far as the time limit of the journey will permit.

THREE WERE KILLED

Bloody Shooting Affray in the Capitol Hotel at Frankfort, Ky.

The Tragedy Is One of the Most Sensational in the History of the State-Details of the Bloody Event.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 17.-A bloody battle in the lobby of the Capitol hotel at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon resulted in the killing of Ethel Scott, of Somerset, a nephew of Gov. Bradley. G. H. Demaree, of Shelbyville, assistant postmaster, Capt. C. H. Julian, and the wounding of Harry McEwan and a traveling salesman named Golden.

The principals in the bloody affair were ex-Congressman Dave Colson, of the Eleventh congressional district, and Scott. The trouble was an old one, growing out of a fight at Chickamagua last year, when Colson commanded the 4th Kentucky volunteers, against Scott, who was a captain.

Witnesses to the affair were taken so much by surprise when the shooting began that most of them were almost panic-stricken, and there are many and conflicting stories as to how the fight began. Col. Colson and a party of friends, among whom was Demaree, were sitting in the lobby engaged in conversation as Scott and Capt. Golden came up the stairs from the bar room. When they had advanced about half way across the room, walking in the direction of Colson, the latter, it is said, half rising from his chair, fired at Scott, who instantly returned the fire.

The shooting then became general and bystanders are at variance as to the number engaged in it. Demaree was standing slightly in front of Colin his opinion not incompatible with son, and young Scott is said to have crouched behind to ward off bullets from Colson's revolver. In an instant Demaree fell dead, pierced by three bullets. Capt. Golden, who accompanied Scott, reeled to one side, falling in the arms of ex-Gov. James B. McCreary, exclaiming, "I am shot."

The smoke in the locality of the antagonists became dense, but Colson continued to press Scott, who retreated backward, shooting as he moved. Colson emptied the chambers of a 48 revolver, and quickly brought a 44 into action. Scott by this time had been shot several times, and as he staggered back and fell down the stairway, Colson, who was within a few feet of him, continued to fire till the lifeless form of Scott rolled over and showed life extinct.

After the killing Col. Colson ran out of the hotel and hurried to the residence of Chief of Police Williams, where he surrendered. He was almost exhausted, and as he entered the house gasped: "I am sorry he would not let me alone. There were three of them shooting at me."

Charles H. Julian, who was shot in the leg, died shortly after reaching a room, death being due to loss of blood

Col. Colson, who killed Scott and who is charged with the killing of both Demaree and Julian, and with shooting Golden, has long been a prominent figure in Kentucky politics. He served two terms in congress and declined a renomination at the hands of the republican party of the 11th district in 1898 in order to accept the colonelcy of the 4th Kentucky regiment in the Spanish war. Scott was a lieutenant and Golden was captain of a company in Colson's regiment, and the trouble which led to the tragedy here began then. A feud sprang up between Colson and Scott while the troops were in camp at Anniston, Ala., and in this it is said by Colson's friends that Capt. Golden was a warm partisan of Scott. The trouble between them at that time culminated in a meeting between them in a restaurant which resulted in Colson being shot by Scott. The regiment was shortly afterward mustered out of the service as a result of the feud.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 18.-While the excitement of the bloody tragedy here has subsided, the affair is still the chief topic discussed. The postmortems of the three victims were held and the bodies prepared for burial. The remains of Ethelbert Scott were shipped to Lexington; those of Luther Demaree to his home at Shelbyville, and Charles Julian will be buried here.

The coroner's jury selected to investigate the bloody tragedy found that Col. David G. Colson was responsible for the deaths of all three of the victims. It was established that he fired the first shot.

ing much with his wounded arm, but in no danger of losing it.

Colson cannot be released on bond, at least not until the grand jury has made to the house Saturday. passed upon the case. Colson has retained James Andrew Scott, a democratic criminal lawyer of this city." Capt. Ben Golden, the bystander who was thought to have been fatally hurt, is resting easy. Several Louisville surgeons are here watching his case, and he will be taken to Louisville to be operated upon to remove

FROM LAKE TO GULF. "Proof of the Pudding

Last Link in Chicago's Great Drainage Canal Formally Opened.

Commencement of a Greater Work Which Will Some Day Connect the Lakes With the Gulf by a Great Ship Canal.

Lockport, Ill., Jan. 18 .- The beartrap dam separating the drainage canal from the Desplaines river was lowered by the sanitary district trustees with the consent of the canal commissioners and Gov. Tanner, and 200,000 cubic feet of water per minute rushed with a roar into the Desplaines river on its way to the Gulf of Mexico.

The opening of the drainage canal was the culmination of an all-night vigil by the board of trustees and canal commissioners at Joliet, which resulted in their securing permission from Gov. Tanner. A special train carried the trustees and commissioners from Chicago to Joliet. After fruitless efforts to reach Gov. Tanner at Springfield by telegraph, communication was secured by telephone and a conference was held with the governor. He telephoned permission to lower the dam at Lockport.

The trustees and commissioners crowded together on the top of the south abutment, and about 200 spectators gained other points of vantage. Col. Isaac L. Taylor, president of the canal commissioners, said:

"This is the completion of one of the greatest engineering feats of modern times. We have found after a careful investigation by one of the best engineers of the country that the sanitary commission has complied fully with the law of 1889, and Gov. Tanner has granted permission to open the canal. I take this occasion to state that this is but the commencement of a greater work which will connect the shipping of the Great Lakes of the north with the Mississippi river and the Gulf of Mexico.

'Under permission granted by Gov. Tanner of the state of Illinois I hereby authorize you to lower the dam."

The massive machinery that operates the dam was set in motion and a sheet of green water shot down the incline of the dam to the Desplaines river immediately below. Gradually the dam was lowered and the sheet of water increased in depth. Three feet below the surface of the water the dam was stopped and 200,000 cubic feet of water went pouring into the Desplaines river with a roar. The water was of a perfect green color and bore but the faintest trace of odor, scarcely perceptible.

FOUR MASKED MEN.

A West Virginia Bank Robbed, the Safe Being Blown With Dynamite-They Escaped.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 18 .- Four masked men forced the doors of Tygart's Valley bank, at Philippi, Tuesday night. They blew up the safe with some powerful explosive, partially wrecking the interior of the building.

They hastily gathered up the money in the safe, about $6,000, and escaped before pursuit could be instituted.

The robbers effected their entrance to the bank by breaking a pane of plate glass in the door. The safe is a complete wreck, and the bank furniture was ruined by the explosion. The hammers and other tools used by the robbers were secured from a blacksmith's shop near by. The robbers made their escape on a B. & O.

A well-known drug drummer, who is pay-ing his regular holiday visit to New Orleans, took the train last Monday evening for a littook the trip to Baton Rouge and in the hurry of his departure left a handsome bone-handled umbrella hanging on a hook in the lobby of the hotel. It was a tempting prize, but probably every kleptomaniac who saw but probably every kleptomaniac who saw it supposed the owner was seated near at hand. At any rate, it remained undisturbed and was still there yesterday when the drummer returned. "By the way," he remarked, after he exchanged greetings with the clerk, "I've managed somehow lo lose my new bone-handled umbrella. Have any of you seen such a thing lying around the office?"

A quick-witted bellboy heard the question and, glancing around, saw the missing article hanging within a foot of his head. Supposing it had been there for only a few moments, he promptly grasped the ferrule. "Is posing it had been there for only a few moments, he promptly grasped the ferrule. "I've been holdin' on to it fer y' ever since y' hung it up." The drug drummer stopped with his hand half way down his pocket and a whimsical smile overspread his countenance. She was not pretty, yet far from being homely; there was no special style about her, and she was as heavy on hand as a log, and, last of all, she was not particularly rich. But she lorded it over the place, and all the other boarders walked behind like the sister of giddy "Dodo." #### WAKING DREAMS.

Between mine eyelids and mine eyes, Like red and satin poppy leaves, Lie soft the dreams of Paradise. They linger when my spirit grieves; They quench the fever in my brain, And kiss my hopes to life again, Between mine eyelids and mine eyes.

Between mine eyelids and mine eyes. Like star-beams melting into peace, Drift on the visions out of skies Wherein eternal years increase; I lose my anchorage to earth, And feel the light of second birth Between mine eyelids and mine eyes.

Between mine eyelids and mine eyes, With love's bright mystery and grace, My precious friends without disguise, With benedictions in each face, Walk slowly midst the trees and flowers, Or sleep within the garden bowers— Between mine eyelids and mine eyes.

Between mine eyelids and mine eyes A wandering spirit sweet as sleep Comes singing where the daylight dies; And tuneful founts of tears aleap Begem the path her footsteps trod; In hers my dim-eyed soul saw God, Between mine eyelids and mine eyes.

Between mine eyelids and mine eyes. I live and conquer, see and know.

O let my spirit on this wise Along the trackless confines go! No other universe so sweet As this—forever bright, complete— Between mine eyelids and mine eyes.

CHAPTER X .- CONTINUED.

It was my final moment. Casting a quick look over the table for anything in the matter of writing that might be used as a pass, my eye spied the rolls of money which had been given me, but nothing else of service was in sight and there was not an instant to lose in investigation. Releasing Clinton, I jumped for the gold, swept it into my pocket, and seizing Scammell's cloak as I went, ran to the window, barely evading the grasp of Mrs. Badely, who made a bob at me and would have hung like a leech had she fastened to my clothing.

In less than a second I was over the rail. and, landing on the turf, took to my heels, pointing myself to the earthworks of the deserted "Oyster Battery," which had been erected by the Americans exactly in the rear of headquarters and on the edge of the Hud-

This battery, grass-grown, dismantled, and neglected as useless by the British, I knew would be no permanent cover, but its embankments made a temporary shield betwixt me and a possible shot from the house had my line of flight been discovered. It was a fair post for a minute's observation and reflection, and, bounding through an empty embrasure, I dodged down, and then raising my head above the edge of the works, looked back.

To my astonishment I was not at once pursued, though two or three figures appeared at the window I had gone through, to thank the day for my good fortune, as the Sabbath was a time for general relaxation and were it not for that my chances would have been next to naught. Few soldiers were about, a corporal's guard only being before the house when I entered it, but that there would soon be wild confusion and a general turning out I had small doubts.

The banks of the Hudson at this point terminated in a steep bluff, at the bottom of which was a narrow strip of beach. Once on the sands, I might run along screened from those at a distance, but could easily be headed and captured like a fish in a purse net. I took the risk, however, and sliding down the steep, sped northward for some ways, coming to the top undiscovered and at the edge of the burned district.

Into this wilderness of destruction I plunged, but soon slackened my pace to a walk to avoid marked observation from those who inhabited the shanties abound ing throughout the ruins. I was fairly safe for the present, and decided there to halt and take stock in myself and circumstances, especially as I had no definite plans before

It came to me that I was now doubly damned-first, as a spy; second, for doing violence to the person of the highest functionary in America. I was without means of escape from the city, and entirely unarmed. I would be hunted like a wolf, and with less mercy from one quarter at least. In short, though I was then breathing free air, I was in desperate straits, and, being so, it took little reflection to see the necessity for acting like a desperate man. I came, then, to this decision: I would attempt a return to the tavern, recover my arms and the paper of instructions, the last of which might at least add weight to my assumed character and help me in forcing my way through the lines-a move that had be come imperative, and might be successful if I acted with dispatch. Then to the Dove I would go, and throw myself under the protection of Stryker, whom, I had reason to believe, was one of the true men secretly helping the patriot cause Of the brave girl to whom I had sacrificed the pass (an act I did not for a mo-ment regret) I thought much. Like me, she was marked for destruction; like me, she had now two virulent enemies, for I could not help believing that Mrs. Badely was at the bottom of Clinton's desire to remove her from a field which threatened the social supremacy and interests of that lady. I wondered how she had fared and in what direction she had fled. But I was in no position for long wonderment. Rising from my seat, I waiked on until I had reached a point opposite King street, then coming out into the Broadway, crossed it and got myself to the rear of the tavern. The man who interfered with me now would be past praying for, but to my surprise I met with no opposition on passing through the kitchen and bounding up the back stairs, marking only the frightened looks of the two women who were cooking.

In a moment I gained my room. It was in a terrible state of confusion. Bloody bedclothes strewed the floor, the mattress was ripped open, blood was upon the table (doubtless Scammell had been laid thereon), and the dust of plaster covered everything. Scammell himself was gone, and ikewise was gone the paper I had counted My arms, however, were unmolested.

taken from the room. I felt new strength | as I fastened on my sword and stuffed the pistols in my belt, and, taking my rifle, I went out, the way I had gone in, and still without opposition.

And still without opposition or interrup tion I regained the burned district. It had been a miracle, but I was now no better off than before, save that I was armed and commanded the lives of at least three men when the attempt should be made to take

I was aware that the wilderness of blackened walls and charred timber, which seemed such a haven at present, would be about the first region over which an organized search would be prosecuted. The very unlikelihood of my returning to the tavern had made it possible for me to enter, regain my arms and leave unmolested, while the darkest holes of the city would be thoroughly scoured, and that at once. To burrow into a crevice in this field of desolation might be possible, but it would end in starvation and final discovery. To disguise myself was not possible, nor, had I the means, would it have availed me much, as my unusual size would have made disguise of little more than temporary benefit. My line of flight, which might easily be traced along the sands of the strip of beach, pointed plainly toward the region which I was now traversing, and to remain in its vicinity was tantamount to placing myself within easy reach of my pursuers. I had but one expedient, and that to elude capture until nightfall by placing myself where there was the least liability of search, and, under cover of darkness, boldly attempting to force the lines at a spot remote from the regular roads of travel.

To this end I bethought me of taking to water, and by swimming outflank the defenses; but I soon realized that the banks of either river would be doubly guarded by sentinels and patrol boats, though, aside from the risk, I gave over the idea, as the attempt would necessitate my complete dis-

Turning northward, therefore, I kept within the limits of the black desolation until I reached its upper termination. Leaving t behind, I cut through the grounds of King's college, walking with apparent carelessness, then on to the hospital, through its confines, and still onward over a garden or two and a field until I had arrived at the dge of Lispenard's Meadows.

I dared not trust myself to its broad open; I could have been too easily marked from a listance, so I turned me toward the Hudon, keeping the while close to the shrubbery which defined the meadow's limits, and finally took refuge under a chestnut tree, though ere long I was up it and as far toward ts top as I durst venture.

Years after I looked in vain for this tree, but it had fallen under the ax, as fell all the heavy timber on the island during the terrible winter of 1789.

I was now wet through. The cloak I had continued to wear to prevent easy idendiffication, together with the reeking weather and the showers of water which had poured from the wet leaves, had saturated ne, and I was anything save comfortable as I sat astride a bough and waited for the day

It was something after five o'clock, but as yet I had discovered no signs of pursuit in my direction. To beguile the time, I reloaded my rifle and pistols, though I laid more reliance on my strength of arm and hardness of fist to overcome a single guard than I did on firearms. The great wet meadow stretched before me like a green sea, broken only by the clump of trees which was to have been my dueling ground on the morrow, and the sluggish brook taking its rise from the Collect, cutting in twain lengthwise and draining the plain which had once been a dangerous and pestilence-breeding gmire. The thunderstorm had passe but the sky was yet heavily overcast, promising a dark, wet night (which suited my purpose), and by the time the sun set and I swung myself from my lofty perch the rain was coming down, not in torrents, but with a steady drip-drop that told of a decided change of weather.

I had no preparations to make, nor from the point at which I had been hiding had I a long distance to go before coming to the line of defenses. This line was not a continuous embankment, but consisted of short breastworks and redoubts at no great distance apart, every foot of the intervening spaces being patrolled by sentinels. I had resolved to strike the line near its center, or about midway betwixt the Kingsbridge and Greenwich roads, and so walked straight over the meadows, crossing the brook ar feeling my way up the rising ground of the northern boundary of the great field.

It was not yet dark, but through the gloom I soon made out that I was exactly in the rear of a redoubt. Retracing my steps, I worked eastward, then again headed north, and this time found myself at the end of a slight dip of the ground, with fortifications on the heights at either hand. The way between appeared unobstructed by military works, though what guard was there posted I could not guess, and as yet it was too light to attempt the passage.

Still protecting my primings, I threw myself on the sodden ground, and in this fashion lay waiting, while the minutes dragged and the half hour seemed length ened to an age. I say half hour, but it might have been more or less. There was no sound save the patter of the rain, the dismal chirrup of a forlorn tree toad, and an occasional hail of a guard. Finally, the gloom grew to dusk, the dusk to darkness, and that to pitchiness in the tree-shadowed passage which lay before me. And now I girded myself for the attempt, fully conscious that my life and death hung finely

I had first thought of crawling through the line like a snake, belly down. but the distance and nature of the ground made such a course impossible unless I was to take the whole night to it, and if discovered I would be taken at a disadvantage. Rising, therefore, I stepped behind a tree, slung my rifle across my back, and drew my cloak well about my sword, throwing back the garment in a manner that left my right arm free From this cover I slipped to another and another, and so onward until I found myself at what I thought to be the edge of a small clearing beyond, but I could neither see nor hear aught ahead, a fact causing me some perplexity. I was debating the feasibility of advancing boldly and risking an encounter, or staying until I could locate the sentinel I knew must be near, when to my right I caught the shadow of a man walking across my line of progress. Ae he came close I heard him humming a tune below his breath, and hoped he would pass on that I might step over his beat unnoticed. There was nothing white about me but my face, and I bent it low that it might not betray me. On he came until he reached the tree under which I was standing, and there halting, leaned his gun against the bole and put his hand into his pocket, presumably for to-

CHAPTER XI. THE DOVE TAVERN.

I had never before and have never since in cold blood struck violently an unarmed man. God knows I recoiled as I felt the plates of this fellow's skull give beneath my fist, and, though I knew my act to be a righteous one, and that had I been discovered I would have had a foot of cold steel in my vitals, I could not at once overcome the feeling of having committed murder.

Whether or not the man was a sentinel I could not tell. The shiftless way of leaning his gun against a tree and humming made me doubt it, but it mattered little-he was an obstacle whose removal was necessary. I was fairly sure there was more to overcome beyond, but resolved to try strategy in passing unless driven to open violence, and even then my fist should not be my mainstay. With my temper inflamed, it boded ill for the man who crossed me; with my pulses slow and even, it went against my grain to spill human blood, especially that of one doing his duty, and this fact alone would have made me a poor soldier for the ranks.

Now I unshipped my sword, drew my cloak about me, and walked on as openly as though I was an officer of "grand rounds." It was miserable going. In the darkness I seemed to find and stub every stone and shoot into as many brambles as might be discovered in a ten-acre wood lot. I passed unchallenged through the shallow ravine, and was, wondering if by chance I had already cleared the lines, when the works of an advanced redoubt rose against the dim sky, and at the same instant there came the ring of a musket and a voice called: "Halt! Who's there?

It was not my plan to halt, or answer either, for that matter. I had located the voice to the right, but could see no one, and was fairly sure that only the noise of my progress had been marked, and not myself Therefore I swung toward the left and hurried along as rapidly and silently as I could, soon having the pleasure of hearing the sentinel stumble across my trail some distance

I had now the redoubt to flank, and, as the woods had been cut down at its front as well as on either side, there was an open space for me to traverse. Here I lowered my dignity by getting on to all-fours, and, holding my blade betwixt my teeth, I crept slowly on ward, taking advantage of every stump and fallen tree as a post to halt and listen. these latter were none too frequent, and I used at least an hour in getting the few hundred feet which lay between the works and the abatis protecting them. Having gained the abatis, I rose and felt my way through the tangled branches of the felled timber, making a deal of noise I thought, but finally got past and into the woods be yond. These woods proved to be but a strip, and a narrow one at that, for I soon came to a road which served me only in showing my location, as I knew of one crossing from the Kingsbridge road to another leading to the

"Halt! Who goes there?" "A friend, but without countersign. Where are you?" I returned, easily, though I made a mighty start.

Then stay where you be, or I fire!" "Very good! Come to me," I answered, swinging myself back and retreating to a tree near by, and from that to another.

It gave me infinite relief to hear the tramp of a horse, and know the man was a mounted vidette, and in the course of a few seconds he went by me to where I had an swered him, though by then I had retreated along the line of the road and was 40 feet Halting his horse, he again chalaway. lenged, but, on receiving no answer, fired his pistol into the woods and began cursing like a pirate. I knew there would be trouble now, and indeed, the echo of the shot had scarce died away when I heard galloping coming from either direction as his fellows hastened to join him. It would not do for me to linger in the vicinity, so I leaped the fence and crossed the highway above him, gaining the opposite timber just before another horse man swept by toward the point of alarm. At this juncture I thanked my stars for three things: First, for the wet and black ness of the night; second, that the lines I had run were the third or inner lines, comparatively illy guarded and but nalf-manned, established to be used only in case of the fall of the outer defenses; and, third, that my present destination lay not beyond the next obstruction. I never would have dared attempt the passage of the "barrier gates," as they were called, a strong and continuous work across the neck of land be low Fort Washington; and even had this been possible, the outpost of the British army at Kingsbridge would have floored anything without a pass or wings. There, in the face of the army of Washington, now but a few miles distant, it would have be come almost a matter of creeping betwixt the legs of the sentinels.

I was not possessed with a great curiosity regarding the outcome of the trouble I had raised on the road, and got myself away from its locality as rapidly as was consistent with rough ground, thickly growing trees and underbrush and pitchy darkness. I felt I was safe at last, safe from immediate disaster, and then awoke to the fact that, save from being warm instead of cold, I was in about as He was within a pace of me, and why he miserable a position as any man unhurt and from any possibility of a helping hand. To stumble onward might land me in some diffiif her mask was on straight." -Tit-Bits.

I was now at a distance from the cross road, and knew not if I was bearing out of my line northward or toward one of the two great highways, to approach either of which was fraught with the greatest danger. Therefore I determined to settle where I was until a glimmer of dawn should show me my way enward. I had no choice of spots and so sat me down on the stump I had but just fallen over, and, drawing my cloak about my head, emulated the extremest patience of Job, who, for all his troubles, had never been beset as was I. Not for an instant did I nod or cease my watchfulness through all the long hours. The rain, noted for its impartiality, seemed to belie the adage and focus on me as though I sat beneath a gargoyle. Toward daylight which came none too early, the heat had gone from my blood, and something the a chill took its place, and with the first eign of lividness in the clouds above I set out, more from an instinct toward flight than from any definite plan. The Dove was my destination, but it was only to be approached by night, and it was scarce an hour's walk from where I sat. Nothing could be gained by wandering aimlessly, yet such was the spirit of flight within me that even movement partook of the nature of safety, and the loadstone attracting me lay still to the northward. Toward the north, then. I turned.

The birds had begun to stir in their nests and twitter sleepily as I came to the edge of the woods and beheld the checker of farm fields and woodland from the elevation on which I was standing, a fine-drawn mist sc blurring the distance that it seemed in I went on, and by sunrise crossed the Minetta water, striking westward that I might get into the wilderness above Greenwich, reaching that almost primeval forest toward noon.

But it is useless to follow my old trail here. I did it years after with great satisfaction to myself, calling up a cloud of memories that brought back my lost youth, albeit it brought (as it does now) a mist before my eyes as well. Through that afternoon I wandered well toward Bloomingdale, and as the shadows fell, cut eastward near the old Apthorp mansion and across the wild land which lies a beautiful waste about the center of the island. [Now Central Park."

I was now close to the Kingsbridge road again, and not half a mile from the Dove. The storm had cleared with the going down of the sun, leaving the air cool and pleasant, but, though I am a lover of nature and prone to mark the effect of storm and sunshine, I remember little of this evening save that it was a gorgeous one, with a moon, something less than half-grown, swimming in the sky like a cleft coin

FELT OF A MAN-EATER.

The Thrilling Experience of a Blind Native of India with a Wild Tiger.

This is a story of a blind man who, unarmed, laid his hand upon a free tiger and lived, unburt, to tell the tale: lived to wish that he were dead. It is the most extraordinary adventure even in the thrilling annals of beastridden India.

The tiger was a man-eater of Mysore, for which the government had offered a reward of 500 rupees.

Many were his exploits. He would bound into a crowd of travelers on the high road and bear one of them away, or snatch the driver from the seat of a creaking bullock cart.

He would even enter villages and break into huts with great blows of his powerful paws and drag forth his Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centred and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy imperial spectacles of a reliable, skiller dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

EARLY STEAMBOATING.

An Early Down-East Skipper's Invariable Rule in Case of Collision.

The steamboat line between Bangor and Boston is the oldest in point of continuous service in America, the first steamers having been put on in 1824, 17 years after the first practical application of steam to the propulsion of vessels. Among the early vessels on the line was the Chancellor Livingston, in which Commodore Vanderbilt had an interest. She was built in New York in 1816, and was considered the masterpiece of Fulton. She had three smokestacks, three masts, a bowsprit and jibboom, and carried a huge squaresail on the foremast, with fore-and-aft sails on the main. The Bangor, built in New York, was the first new boat that ever came to Maine. She was about 400 tons, well fitted for her time and did a profitable business, generally carrying about 120 passengers on a trip at the rate of six dollars each, between Bangor and Bosten. She ran on the Bangor and Boston route until the fall of 1841, and in 1842 she was taken to the Mediterranean, where, for some time, she was engaged in earrying pilgrims from Alexandria on their way to Mecca. When she arrived over there, being painted white, not a Mussulman would step foot on her, white being their mourning color; so she was painted black, and then business flourished in the pilgrim trade. The Bangor was purchased by the sultan of Turkey and added to his navy. Another steamer named Bangor, a propeller, made a few trips between Bangor and Boston, and was then purchased by the United States government and sent out to take part in the attack on Vera Cruz, where she won fame. She was the first iron steamer ever built in America.

In 1863 the steamer Katahdin appeared. The Katahdin was in many respects the most remarkable sidewheel steamboat ever produced in the United States. She was as good a sea boat as most of the propeller steamers, fast in her day, and was followed by the most surprising good fortune. Other boats were wrecked in the storms that she went through without the least trouble, and others would strike on rocks along the dangerous. coast of Maine that the Katahdin always dodged. She never lost either a passenger or any freight, and, in short, such was her luck, that down east people, especially sailor men, came to regard her as having a charmed existence. She continued to run between Boston and Bangor, with the exception of a few winters on Long Island sound, until the summer of 1895, when she was broken up for her metal.

Steamboating down east is a very different thing now from what it was in the old days. It is related by old The Blue Grass Murseries travelers that, before the war, and even later, the bill of fare on the boats consisted chiefly of ham and eggs. There was nothing much to eat, but a great plenty to drink. Now there is a great variety to eat and not so much to drink.

Capt. Charles B. Sanford, who for many years was the ruling spirit of the Boston and Bangor line, was one of the most picturesque characters on this coast. He was at one time worth about $250,000, all made in steamboating, but he lived high and at the time of his death, a few years ago, had very little property. He was absolute master of his boats, and his word was law in everything. Some of his sayings and doings are related to this day, although he retired from steamboating in 1875. Once the steamer Cambridge ran into a schooner in the Penobscot river and sent her to the bottom, cutting her in halves. Capt. Sanford was below at the time, at dinner. Feeling the shock, he rushed up into the pilot house and asked what had happened. "We've sunk a schooner, sir," responded the quartermaster. "Where is she?" asked the captain. "Well, the forward part of her is over here to starboard, and the after part of her to port," was the reply. The quartermaster expected that the captain would rake all hands o.er rather pleased than otherwise. pail, one year, dire "That's the way!" he roared, "that's as to subscribers: the way-when you hit 'em, cut 'em right in two!"

Then he went below and finished his dinner as though nothing had happened .- N. Y. Sun.

"How did the hero of the story come at?" he asked of the lad who had just colled up a novel and got up to stretch bimself. "He was a chump!" was the reply, in tones of disgust. "He had two guns, a knife, a bronco, a lasso and a bottle of pizen, and yit he let de villain punch de breath out of him and git away wid de beroine and a million dollars in cash."

The 25 P. Davis trees were the first to die, and the Jennetings and Minklers are the best preserved of those surviving. Nearly all the trees the slant is steepest. So far as can be determined from a study of the old trees remaining in this orchard, decay and decline are traceable in nearly every instance to cutting out large limbs, splitting down at forks and injury at base from borers, sunscald or other causes unknown. It appears that trees which made a low or branching fruit were longest-lived. #### PAYING INVESTMENT.

Steel Roadway in Spain Paid for Itself in Two Years by Saving in Road Repairs.

The American consul at Valencia, pain, reports these facts to the state separtment at Washington: The road between Valencia and Grao is two miles in length, and an average of 3,200 vehicles pass over it daily. Until 1892 it was constructed of flint stone. The annual cost of keeping it in repair was about 35,000 pesetas. At the rate of exchange at that date this amounted to The majority of old orchards in Illi- $5,470. Ample room is allowed between the rails for two horses to walk abroast. Horses do not appear to slip on rails of this construction. At each side of the rail are layers of binding stones, the paved road being higher than the face of the rails. #### HOW TO BUILD ROADS.

They Shold Be Rounded Up in the Center so as to Shed Water to the Side Drains.

The first principle applicable to all living in this old orchard are on the roads is good drainage. "Take the wanorth hillside and they are best where fer out and keep the water out" is a rule which must be followed in the making of every road. It is not enough to dig trenches at the side of the road and call them drains. These trenches must be real drains; that is, they must have a good fall to a clear outlet, and be in every respect capable of carrying the water away. The road must be rounded up in the center so as to shed the watop and bore only moderate crops of ter quickly to the side drains. There must be a track in the center of the road along which travel can pass. This track must be hard and smooth so as to the latter were in full bearing, but were afford the least friction to travel, preshort-lived and not very productive, vent ruts and at the same time permit water to run off the sides quickly. Ruts and holes must not be permitted to orm, but be filled up as soon as they appear. The drainage must not be surface water, but in many instances must extend below the surface in the form of tile underdrains, so as to form a firm foundation and lessen the destructive action of the frost-injurious only to wet and water soaked roads. In addition to the simple work on roads, better methods with regard to culvert. and bridge construction are greatly peeded. The principles above enumerated with respect to roads require an infinity of special methods and treatments in arriving at the best results according as the land is high lying or low; is clay, sand, vegetable-mold, etc.; is difficult of drainage; according to the extent of travel, the quality of road metal obtainable-these and many other varying conditions. That road making and highway work of all kinds is considered a matter in which every man is proficient is probably one of the rant the following conclusions: That evils underlying the bad conditions of

END OF A CLUB.

It Was Brought About by the Unforeseen Possibilities of a Rule About Asking Questions.

After the Cracker Barrel club became disorganized there was no satisfactory place for the men and boys to congre gate during the long evenings until at last the regular sitters formed the habit of meeting at the engine house, where the usual number of unanswerable questions were propounded. Soon after the publication of "The Message to Garcia" it was brought to the quiet borough by a commuter, who proposed the organization of a Message to Garcia club, the purpose being, he said, to diminish the number of questions which were always asked, and generally could not be answered by the person asking them. It was then suggested by a former president of the Cracker Barrel club that a rule of the new organization should be that if anyone asked a question which he could not answer himself, he should treat the crowd. This proposition was received as most satisfactory by all; at least none dis-

Among the members was a youth from over the mountain, who was serving an apprenticeship at blowing bladders in a near-by snuff factory. On the morning following the organization of the Message to Garcia ciub, this youth, while resting for a moment from his work, inquired of the foreman of the factory if the asking of questions, talked about at the organization of the club, held as against a person when away from the club. He was told that such was the condition, and that if he asked a question which he could not answer he was liable to pay for treating the crowd, even though they were not present when the question was

The average price per pound, however, has declined considerably more than onehalf during the same period, or from 5.37 cents in the earlier year to 2.39 cents for the year 1898—the average for the current year not yet being ascer-

Beet sugar production slightly surpassed that of cane sugar for the first time in 1883, when 2,147,000 tons of the former were produced, as against 2,107,-000 tons of the latter. Notwithstanding the growing cheapness of the commodity and the European bounty system for beet sugar, the quantity of cane sugar produced continued to increase from year to year until 1895 when it amounted to 3,530,000 tons. The destruction of the Cuban plantations accounts for the fact that the output of cane sugar has declined until the quantity manufactured during the current year amounted to only 2,904,000 tons, as compared with 5,510,000 tons of beet sugar. It is not likely that the limit of the world's demand for sugar has even nearly been reached, and with the introduction of improved methods the West Indian cane growers should be able to meet and overcome the competition of the European beet farmers. It is not in the nature of things that an essentially tropical product should be permanently displaced by a substitute grown in the lighter soil and under the less fervid rays of the sun of the temperate zone.—Philadelphia Record.

LOUISVILLE.  Cow in a Golf Match.

Ed Tufts, of Los Angeles, was playing golf with a friend recently. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts untethered the cow, and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball, and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in expressions. ent calmly finished the hole in seven, and claimed the hole. "But I made it in two," protested Tufts, gleefully. "No, you didn't," declared the other; "you made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. Cuticura Soap combines delicate emollient properties derived from Cuti-CURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

All that has been said of Cuticura Soap may be said with even greater emphasis of Cuticura OINTMENT, the most delicate and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with Cuticura Soap (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in "A SHAMPOO FOR FALLING HAIR, and ITCHING, SCALY SCALPS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.
